Triumfant Announces John Stabb as Senior Vice President of Sales

Rockville, MD—December 2, 2008 -- Triumfant®, the industry leader in proactive monitoring and control software, announces that John Stabb has joined the company as Senior Vice President of Sales. With more than 20 years experience of successful U.S. and international sales and marketing, John will set the sales strategy, build the sales team and provide oversight for all selling activity as Triumfant aggressively expands its sales initiatives.

Triumfant continues to build momentum in the market as organizations gain understanding of the capabilities of the product in critical areas such as anomaly based malware detection, green IT power management and incident and problem management. The broad application of the Triumfant platform means that Stabb will be building a sales force that will take the company's message into commercial organizations as well as into civilian and DOD agencies within the federal government.

"Triumfant has some very real technological advantages that create compelling value for our customers and uniquely position the company for explosive growth," said Stabb. "I look forward to taking the Triumfant message directly to the market to help organizations see the benefits of the Triumfant platform and help them apply the product to address their specific requirements."

Stabb joins Triumfant with a long and distinguished history of building, motivating and managing successful sales teams. Prior to joining Triumfant, Stabb served as Vice President of Sales at ACE*COMM Corporation. Previously, Stabb was Director of Sales for Riverbed Technologies where he helped generate early stage revenues, leading to a successful billion dollar acquisition by Aether Systems in 2000. At Aether, John was promoted to Vice President of Enterprise sales where he oversaw direct, indirect, telesales and sales engineering teams. Prior to Riverbed, he was head of sales and General Manager for International Business for Microlog Corporation. Stabb holds MBA and Bachelor of Science degrees from Georgetown University.

"We are genuinely excited to have someone with John's depth of selling experience join the Triumfant team," said John Prisco, President and CEO, Triumfant. "John excels at building highly proficient sales teams that solve real problems for their customers and therefore deliver real value for their investment. The combination of this approach and our product's unique value proposition creates a powerful selling engine that will be a key driver to Triumfant's ongoing success."
